Girl and 2 Men Injured in North London. Two men and a girl who had been to the Chelsea Arts Ball at the Albert Hall were involved in a serious motor accident on their way home early today. They were all taken to the Royal Free Hospital and were detained. They are - Miss Maurita Armstrong, 24, of St. Mary's-road, Highbury; cut face and head, concussion. Hugh Geoffrey Pollock, 23, of 15, Coleherne-road, S.W.10; severe head and face cuts. Donald King, 23, cut face and head, suffering from severe shock. The most severely injured was Mr. Pollock. His tongue was nearly bitten off and had to be "sewn" by a surgeon. Miss Armstrong was unconscious when taken to the hospital, and her condition is serious. The accident happened soon after 5 o'clock in the Pentonville-road. Mr. Pollock, a medical student at Bart's, was driving the party in a new car, and when at the top of the hill, near the reservoir, it came into collision with a large steam milk wagon. The three occupants were thrown into the road and their car was wrecked. GAOL FOR SHORT NIGHT.

CHAPTER XIX.—Continued.

"H'E'S—" Lynd hesitated in turn. Though he disowned the man in the cabin as his son, there was no need to tell Wheeler the real reason for his determination that Smith should not suffer. "He'll be dead in less than an hour," he amended.

"The deuce he will!" Wheeler ejaculated, startled. "I mean—"

"It doesn't matter what you mean," Lynd retorted, sharply. "I tell you captain, we've got to get that destroyer back and get Smith off it—for them have this body they're after. It's got to be done."

Wheeler shook his head. "You know what it means," he pointed out. "I we own up to that, we don't get away with it as we did half an hour ago. We stand our trial at Noumea."

"What if we do?" Lynd retorted harshly. "Do you think I'd ever know another moment's peace if I let him go because of that? Would you?"

"He—he'd have to stand trial with us and see what we get," Wheeler objected. "He did it himself, too—didn't give us a chance to stop him from going, as you know—"

"Wheeler"—Lynd thrust his strained face toward that of the captain—"would you ever know another hour's peace of mind if you let him go now? Think, man—and think like a man!"

Slowly, after a pause in which Lynd waited in utter disregard of the driving rain, Wheeler shook his head.

"No," he owned. "I wouldn't, colonel."

"Not—not if it's to be for nothing—if Mr Lynd is really past saving."

"Oh, don't worry about him," Lynd advised in a hard way. "He's probably dead already, judging by what I looked like when I left him."

Wheeler stared curiously. There was something wrong, something very wrong indeed, since Lynd spoke of his own son with this brutal callousness. But now, as he stared, he realized the Lynd was driving himself to this, as ruthlessly as he, Wheeler, would have driven the yacht if flight from the destroyer had been a possibility.

"Come, man!" Lynd fired out with rasping impatience. "Set your wires to work and get that destroyer back! Why are you waiting like this? Are you afraid to face the music?"

"Oh, I'd face it, little as I like the tune," Wheeler retorted. "If he could do what he did, risk his whole life, I'd risk two to five years of mine with good compensation at the finish of it. But we can't get that destroyer back. With the start she's got now, we couldn't even catch her between here and Noumea, and once she gets there—"

He hurried toward the ladder leading down to the deck.

"I've got it!" he exclaimed, and left Lynd to follow as he would.

Lynd was on the foredeck Lynd encoun-

LECTURE
MONDAY, TH
FROM THE CO
STUDENTS IN AN HOTEL SCENE.
GLASS THROWN ON THE FIRE.
£5 FINES.

A REMARKABLE scene in an hotel in which hospital students figured after a football match had a sequel at Wood Green Police Court on Saturday, when Hugh Grove Stanton, of Woodbury avenue, Winchmore Hill, and John Powell, of Hopper's road, Winchmore Hill, students at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, were each fined £5 for being disorderly and refusing to quit the Fox Hotel, Palmers Green.
Mr. Fairbairn, for Mr. Davey, the licensee, said that Stanton and Powell went into the hotel, and after they took seats at a table in the lounge Powell asked the waitress for beer.
Miss Cowdray, the waitress, said that Stanton and Powell were accompanied by two other young men. She brought the drinks ordered, and when she asked Powell for payment he offered her a bunch of keys and a halfpenny. When she asked him again he said that he would pay on one condition.
Then Powell and Stanton put their glasses of beer on the floor and tried to pick them up with their feet. The beer was spilt, and then Powell picked up his glass and deliberately threw it in the fire.

"MOST UNSEEMLY."

Mr. Davey said that he asked Powell to pay for the beer he ordered, Powell then behaved in a most unseemly manner. Mr. Davey asked the men to leave. They hesitated, and he went to call the police. The men had gone when he returned.

Stanton came back shortly afterwards, however, and argued that Mr. Davey was wrong, and that he and his friends were right. Powell had to be taken to the police station before he would give his name and address.

It was stated that the drinks served to the men had not yet been paid for. Stanton said that he thought he left the house when he was ordered to go. Powell stated that he was extremely sorry that he behaved in so unseemly a way. He must have been under the influence of drink.

"Rags are all very well," said the magistrate in imposing the fines, "but they cannot be allowed in public houses."
Powell was ordered to pay for the broken glass.
